

JEFFREY COOK of Earl E. Cook Real Estate in Fairbanks (left) chats with Wesley Aiken (center), land chief of the Arctic Slope Regional Corporation, and Elijah Rock, also of the corporation, during the five-day management training program recently held in Barrow under the sponsorship of the University of Alaska.

— UA photo

Management Training At Barrow

Twenty-one persons participated in the Management-Training Program held in Barrow during the last week in February.

The program was sponsored by the University of Alaska's Division of Statewide Services, and was coordinated in Barrow by David Fauske, the university's representative there.

Dr. Mildred Matthews, of the university's Tourism, Business and Vocational Training Office, assisted in organizing the program.

"The participants seemed to find the training useful," she said, "and we plan to offer another similar series of classes in office procedure in Barrow. Similar training programs may also be set up in other communities throughout the state if there is sufficient local interest."

Those participating in the five-day management-training program were:

Jesie Kaleak, Louis Suvlu, Robert Suvlu, Elijah Rock, Arthur Panigeo, Wesley Aiken (Land Chief) and Joseph Upicksoun (President), all of the Arctic Slope Regional Corporation.

Evelyn Tuzroyluke, Johnny Nusunginya, Wiggons Lampe, Don Nusunginya and Charlotte Brower, all of the North Slope Borough.

Elizabeth Hutchinson and Anna Jack of the North Slope Borough School District; Elizabeth Hollingworth of the Barrow city Council;

Jane Tongen and Mary Akpik of the Barrow Utilities Co-op; Dan Matumeak, Glenn Edwards and Sheril Sage.