

Anthropological

On March 22 and 23, the Anchorage Community College will host the "First Annual Anthropological Conference" for the State of Alaska.

The meeting is intended to bring together all those who are interested in anthropological studies in the state — archaeologists, ethnographers, ethnohistorians and others interested in Native cultures.

Anthropologists from outside the state have been invited since some of them have done considerable work in Alaska. Readers of Tundra Times who are concerned about anthropological studies, research and the teaching of anthropology are welcome to attend.

Native organizations are encouraged to send representatives to help make this first meeting a start in a cooperative effort which will benefit all people concerned.