

FBI Arrests Fairbanks Man

A Fairbanks man is being held in $500,000 bail at the State Jail on charges of intent to extort $300,000 and making a bomb threat in connection with cargo flights to the North Slope.

Travis O. Spaulding, 59, of 177 Third Avenue appeared Monday morning before Federal Magistrate Andrew J. Kleinfeld on the two counts.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation arrested Spaulding Friday at his home and charged him with attempting to extort the money from Fairbanks based Alaska International Air and threatening to blow up aircraft of an interstate carrier.

Spaulding will receive a preliminary hearing March 20 at 9:45 a.m. before Kleinfeld. Fairbanks Lawyer H. Bixler Whiting was appointed by the court to defend Spaulding.

AIA operates Lockheed Hercules cargo aircraft.

Spaulding is charged by the FBI with writing a letter which AIA received Feb. 19, claiming that three bombs would be placed aboard separate aircraft unless the company followed certain demands.

A second letter was received by AIA Feb. 27, demanding $300,000 in used $100 bills and that payoff details be arranged. AIA used the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner to answer the letters as instructed by the writer.

The accused was in possession of a .45 caliber automatic pistol fully loaded and the hammer drawn back, when arrested, according to Martin H. Moore, special agent in charge of the FBI, Alaska.

Moore said the pistol was among other weapons and ammunition taken in a 1968 burglary of the National Guard Armory in Fairbanks.
