Living healthy is good living

The more we can learn about taking better care of ourselves, the more we're able to enjoy all that life has to offer. And that is true for all of us.

There was a time not long ago when many Alaska residents had a tough time finding proper medical attention. Unfortunately, health facilities for most of the state were either too far away, or too expensive for many to travel to. Medical services in Western Alaska have changed dramatically in a short time.

Today, programs like the Chevron Alaska Health Fairs supplement medical services in communities across Alaska, from Ketchikan to Kotzebue and from Unalaska to Valdez. Last year, over 30 Chevron Alaska Health Fairs reached over 10,000 Alaskans. Some attended to have their vision checked. Some to learn about proper nutritional balance. And others to be checked for Hepatitis B, a growing concern to residents of Western Alaska. This year's Chevron Alaska Health Fairs are expected to reach even more.

Chevron USA is proud of its involvement in health care. Because it reaches so many and helps insure they'll be part of Alaska's bright future.
