Last fall Alaskan students from 39 locations in the state traveled more than 54,000 miles to study at SJC in Sitka. The 120 full-time students enjoy a student to faculty ratio of six to one. The professional instructors carry on no research; they are free to pursue what they like best—teaching students. In class, in the hallway, over coffee in the teacher's home, the learning process goes on...in a very personal way.

Sheldon Jackson College may be the college for you, too. Write today for more information.
