

VISTA Volunteer Misses Luci's Wedding

Douglas C. Dague, 20, of Cumberland, Wisconsin was invited to a wedding recently.

But he wasn't able to go.

It wasn't just an everyday wedding, as weddings go, but he still wasn't able to attend.

Almost 6,000 miles of ocean and land separated him and the ceremony location.

Doug, a VISTA volunteer recently graduated from the University of Alaska's special VISTA training course, was in the village of St. Paul on the Pribilof Islands.

He was getting ready to leave for St. George, the other principal village in the islands, when he received the gold-lettered invitation marked "The White House."

Young Dague had been a friend of Pat Nugent, now the husband of President Lyndon B. Johnson's daughter Luci, back in Wisconsin.
