The 1969 Fairbanks Native Association potlatch will be held March 22 at Lathrop High School in Fairbanks this year, Gerald Ivey, president of the FNA said this week.

The distinctive annual potlatch, as usual, will feature native food, both Indian and Eskimo dancing and some games such as blanket tossing and "break the beaver bone."

FNA informed the Tundra Times that an Indian dance group will be coming from Juneau this year and that the organization was working to organize an Eskimo dance group for this year's potlatch.

Marcelo Quinto is the entertainment chairman for the potlatch.

This year's potlatch will be the sixth such celebration sponsored by the FNA during the sled dog races. The first potlatch was held in Fairbanks March 21, 1963 at the Eagles Hall.

Donations of native foods and wild Alaska game meats are being requested by FNA for the potlatch.

Mrs. Poldine Carlo of Fairbanks is in charge of food preparation this year.
