

Bethel walks its sobriety talk

by Jay Barret, KYUK
reprinted with permission from
YKHC Messenger

Over 50 Bethel residents "walked their talk" Dec. 5 at the Kuskokwim College's town meeting on what to do about problem drinking in Bethel.

Organized by KuC's Gerri Sumpter, and moderated by the Yukon Kuskokwim Health Corporation's Ori Williams, the event at the Yup'ik Cultural Center drew a concerned and vocal crowd.

Williams said the meeting was not called to debate the dry vote or being wet or dry. "That's been decided," he said. The meeting was called on the assumption that Bethel has an alcohol problem, he added.

Going from that premise, the topics covered concern for teens and their education on alcohol, public drunkenness near schools, making it harder for bootleggers to do business, rehabilitation, changing possession laws, and support for recovering alcoholics.

Stopping bootleggers, though, became the focus, with suggestions ranging from asking the city and state governments to pass laws that would make it easier to arrest bootleggers, to police or residents following known "bootlegging" cabs to the homes of bootleggers.

Said one man, "just have police follow the black cabs with the yellow lettering to the bootlegger's home. You might not be able to arrest them, but you'll stop them from selling."

Many in the group were surprised to hear several statistics from Police Chief Chris Liu concerning bootlegging. One was that it takes a very long time, with many involved steps to make a bootlegging arrest. Another was that Liu's department had tried 35 times this year to make undercover bootlegging buys — and all of them failed. He said, "Bootleggers are reluctant to sell to people they don't know."

Many resolutions came from the meeting: ideas and suggestions that could make bootlegging harder, such as establishing a centralized importation site where all liquor must pass and be taxed before it can be picked up. Another is to ask the City Council to pass an ordinance restricting the type of container alcohol is imported in — specifically plastic, as bootleggers prefer plastic bottles of vodka.

The night's most significant resolution was to ask the City Council to authorize and fund two more police officers to concentrate on alcohol interdiction.

That, Liu said, would allow his department to do a better job in solving the visible alcohol problem. He said it would cost taxpayers about 100-thousand dollars a year.

Very little talk, however, was directed at curing the under-lying alcohol problem: why some people have a need to drink, causing the demand that fuels the supply from bootleggers and creates public drunkenness.

Some there had to point out to others that an alcoholic needs to want to change and that morality and need could not be legislated.

Another meeting is planned for December, when the group will discuss progress on their resolutions. The date and time will be announced later.

THE AFN SOBRIETY MOVEMENT celebrates 1995!

Through the collective and unwavering support of our sponsors, the AFN/SM was able to accomplish the following:

- Achieve its first year of self-sufficiency (raising over $70,000)
- Travel and give presentations in over 40 communities throughout Alaska and the Lower 48
- Collect over 3,500 sobriety pledge signatures from men, women and children
- Host its second successful sobriety dance during the annual AFN Convention (raising over $4,000)
- Submit written public testimony in support of the Alaska Natives Commission Report during joint congressional hearings in Washington, D.C.
- Play a major role in getting the State of Alaska and the statewide Native community to establish and recognize the month of March (1995-96) as SOBRIETY AWARENESS MONTH (a.k.a. SAM).

The AFN Sobriety Movement Council would like to thank all the organizations who contributed so generously to its 1995 campaign!

Polar Bear ($5,000 plus):
Cook Inlet Region, Inc.
Exxon of Alaska

Indian Health Service
Southcentral Foundation

Raven ($1,000 plus):

Afognak Native Corp.
Alaska State AFL/CIO (In-kind)
Bristol Bay Native Corp.
Downtown Deli & Cafe
National Bank of Alaska
Hickel Investment Co.
Yukon-Kuskokwim Health Corp.

Alaska Village Electric Co-Op
Arctic Slope Regional Corp.
SKW Eskimos, Inc.
Koniag, Inc.
NANA Regional Corp.
Anchorage Community Partnership

Sea Lion ($500 plus):

AK Native Alcohol Recovery Ctr
UIC Foundation, Inc.
Livingston Stone, Inc.
Norton Sound Health Corp. (NSHC)
Bering Straits Native Corp.

Cook Inlet Tribal Council
First National Bank of Anchorage
Kawerak, Inc.
Metlakatla Indian Community

Caribou ($250 plus):
Mr. & Mrs. Condon

Sea Otter ($100 plus):

Alaska Council on Prevention (Staff)
Alaska Village Initiatives (In-kind)
Donald Dapevich
J.C. Penney
Sealaska Corp.

Alaska Sales & Service
Law Office of Aileen Smith
Gold's Gym
Wilson Justin
NSHC Recovery Center & Staff
Tundra Times

Sobriety is a LIFESTYLE, which thousands of Alaskans have claimed and enjoy ~ and from which all society benefits. This holiday season, give (live) the gift that keeps on giving ~ Sobriety: a positive, healthy productive way of life, free from the devastating effects of alcohol and drugs.

MERRY CHRISTMAS .
AND HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Tundra Times
is pleased to bring you

Singing the Sober Song

each quarter of the year.
Don't miss out on your
FREE copy with your paid subscription to
Tundra Times
for only $30.00 per year

P.O. Box 92247
Anchorage, AK 99509-2247