

Avocados shouldn't arrive as guacamole.

(You should have called Alaska International Air)

Remember those avocados you picked in California and shipped home to Nome?
And how they arrived so smashed you asked the shipper for his guacamole recipe?
Remember how you swore you would never ship by air again in Alaska . . . and how impossible it was to stand by your word?
Next time, call Alaska International Air. We're Alaska's largest all cargo carrier with service to points all around Alaska and worldwide charter service all around the globe. We take extra care with every shipment we move.
From avocados to construction equipment, you can trust your cargo with us.
Because Alaska International takes a special interest in all our shipments.
And we leave the guacamole up to you.
