

YOUR BANK WANTS TO KEEP THIS A SECRET.

Your savings account might not be paying what it should.

Your bank wants you to think the interest rate is what matters when it comes to savings accounts. It's important, but it's really not the best way to determine if you'll earn the highest interest on your hard-earned savings dollars.

Beware the minimum monthly balance rule.

Ask about how your bank pays interest on savings accounts. Some financial institutions pay only on the minimum monthly balance—definitely not a good idea if you make frequent withdrawals from your account. Worse yet, some pay on the minimum quarterly balance. Others pay during limited time periods or compound the interest only on a monthly basis.

First National pays up.

At First National, you'll earn 6% interest* on the daily balance of your account...from the date of deposit to the date of withdrawal. A great interest rate. Compounded daily. Paid quarterly. In other words, you'll earn more. Our apologies to your bank...we just thought this was one secret you ought to know.

First National...
still the one to count on.
