ANCIENT INDIAN TOTEM IN THE NEW TRADITION.

Steve Perrin of Juneau carves traditional Indian totems with a new look. He's one of the 2,000 Alaskan Natives from over 100 villages who market their work through A.N.A.C.—an Eskimo, Aleut, and Indian member-owned co-operative. The massive hand-carved totems of Southeastern Alaska may be a part of Alaska's vanishing heritage. But the economic benefits to Alaskan Native craftsmen are here to stay.
