

Dr. Robert D. Burgess, recently named one of four outstanding federal employees in Alaska, examines Shirley Meyer at the Alaska Native Medical Center. Burgess is medical director of the Community Health Aide Program. He serves as the primary medical and curriculum advisor to the director of the program and assists in preparation of related written materials. Under his direction, standards for community health aide training programs around the state have been developed. He also rewrote the entire "Community Health Aide/Practitioner Manual," over a four-year period.
