two year $50,000 study of the mineral potential of the Yukon-Taiya region, as well as determining expectations for mining development under conditions of adequate supply.

The Senator called the proposals, "A small first step, but a vital one."

The study would be part of a U.S.-Canadian agreement to appraise the economic potential of the construction of the Yukon-

Taiya power project. As projected, the installation would have an initial output of 700,000 kilowatts with eventual capability for 4,000,000 kilowatts.

"Both the initial studies and the project itself," said the Senator, "could be used as a model of responsible coordination by both sides of the border."

The study, proposed by the Alaska Power Administration, would be undertaken by the Geological Survey with funds allocated to it by the APA.
