The University of Alaska Fairbanks, College of Rural Alaska, is seeking applications for a Tenure-track teaching position in psychology at the Assistant Professor level, to begin Fall Semester 1990. The successful candidate will bring a blend of social, clinical, and community psychology background to teaching and research in a cross-cultural context. Typical teaching load would be three undergraduate and two graduate courses (depending on program needs). The college emphasizes a cross-cultural orientation in both course offerings and research interests. Faculty are expected to establish a strong research agenda. As well as teaching on campus, the position offers opportunity to work in off-campus programs involving distance delivery.

QUALIFICATIONS: Ph.D. in clinical/counseling and/or social/community psychology required. Preferred qualifications include demonstrated ability to teach social, clinical or community psychology, and to engage in applied research, as well as multicultural professional experience and research, particularly with culturally diverse and rural populations.

In addition to a graduate program in Community Psychology and an undergraduate psychology program, the Department of Behavioral Science and Human Services offers a graduate program in Guidance and Counseling and undergraduate programs in Sociology and Social Work. The College and Department have extensive campus sites in rural Alaska and a special commitment to Native Americans, rural, and multi-cultural communities.

The greater Fairbanks area is a modern community of over 60,000 people, with spectacular scenery, cultural events, and unlimited opportunities for outdoor activities all four seasons of the year.

Please send vita and three letters of reference to: NORMAN G. DINGES, PH.D., CHAIR, PSYCHOLOGY SEARCH COMMITTEE, DEPARTMENT OF BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES AND HUMAN SERVICES, UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA, FAIRBANKS, ALASKA 99775-1380. Applications must be postmarked by March 1, 1990.

PRESIDENT UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA SYSTEM

The Presidential Search Committee of the University of Alaska invites nominations or application for the position of President of the University of Alaska system. The President is the chief executive officer of the system and reports to an eleven member Board of Regents.

The University of Alaska is a statewide system of higher education comprised of three multi-campus universities with extended satellite colleges and sites throughout Alaska, providing educational services to urban and rural populations of diverse cultural backgrounds. The system's administrative center is located in Fairbanks. The university is both a land grant and sea grant institution with strong state and federally funded research programs, many with outstanding international reputations. It has extensive programmatic and research relationships with Pacific Rim and other nations.

The university completed a major restructuring of its academic units in 1987 and expects to continue the operational implementation of that process during the tenure of its next President. Desired characteristics and qualifications include:

Academic & Administrative leadership

- willing to support and facilitate the multiple missions of the university ranging from developmental education through graduate programs and research
- supportive of building high quality in each of the university's mission areas
- able to maximize the unique global position and potential of Alaska through the educational and research programs of the university
- experienced in managing and leading a complex organization
- able to coordinate educational and administrative activities spread over a vast geographic area and reflecting wide ranges of economic and cultural diversity

Resource Acquisition

- effective in obtaining funds through public appropriations process
- supportive of individual and institutional efforts to secure external funding
- able to enhance the continued development of the University Foundation

Effective Communication

- able to plan and implement responses of both short-term and longer-term university needs and to enhance the university's organizational and educational restructuring
- able to communicate effectively the status and image of the university through presentation and publication of its accomplishments
- able to appreciate, value and enhance the involvement in higher education by people of different cultures and heritages

The Presidential Search Committee will begin to review credentials on February 1, 1990. Applicants should submit a current resume and a letter discussing their qualifications for the position to:

Mr. Herbert C. Long, Chair
Presidential Search Committee
University of Alaska
Suite 302A, John Burroughs Building
810 Yukon Drive
Fairbanks, AK 99775-5080

The anticipated date of the appointment is July 1, 1990.
