

FIGHTING DRUGS BEGINS AT HOME...

"Families represent our future and our dreams as well as our past and traditions... Let's build communities that our elders can be proud of and that provide real opportunities for our children."

COMMITMENT

to fighting drug and alcohol abuse starts at home with strong families and community involvement. Tony Knowles understands that we must be tough on drug abuse but also give individuals and families with problems the chance to help themselves.

As mayor of Anchorage, Tony Knowles fought to get drug dealers off the street — from 1985 to 1987, drug arrests increased eightfold and cocaine seizures quadrupled. Tony also made sure there were effective treatment and counseling programs for those who needed help. He sent police officers into the schools to educate our children about the dangers of drug abuse. Under Willie Hensley's leadership, NANA Regional Corporation shut down its hotel bar despite the loss of profits. Tony Knowles and Willie Hensley — the experienced and effective leadership Alaska needs in the fight against drug and alcohol abuse.
