Iditarod Trail Race Lottery—

Statewide Potential Purse of $195,000 Organized

ANCHORAGE — A statewide lottery, with a potential purse of $195,000, has been organized by the Iditarod Trail Race Committee, sponsors of the Iditarod Trail 1,000 mile sled dog race from Anchorage to Nome.

Lottery ticket sales will begin immediately in the entire state according to Tom Johnson, Treasurer of the Iditarod Trail Committee.

"This lottery will, in all probability, be another big first along with the race itself," states Johnson. "We anticipate that the winner, or winners, will take home a record amount of money ever won in an Alaskan lottery."

To insure a record purse, the organizers have put half a million tickets on sale in virtually every city, town and village in the state.

According to Johnson the winner will be the ticket holder who correctly guesses the exact number of days, hours, minutes, and seconds it will take the winning musher and his team to complete the entire race.

In the event of a tie, the pot will be split among similar guesses. If no exact guess is made, the closest time guessed will be declared the winner.

Tickets are $1.00 each and the winner or winners will be declared within 72 hours of the completion of the race.

"We decided to have this race and the lottery to raise money for the Committee so that it can begin the work of preserving the trail, restoring some of the historic road houses and portions of many gold rush towns that have begun to deteriorate with time."

We also plan to lobby to make the Iditarod Trail a part of the National Historic Trail system. After all, the Iditarod Trail was one of the last existing and functional trails in North America . . . and still is in many areas," says Johnson.

To help potential winners make an educated guess, the organizers have prepared a poster which lists the winning times of the historic Nome-Candle-Nome races of the early 1900's.

"It's really anybody's guess as to the winning time," says Johnson. "The posters will probably give some idea as to an educated guess, but since this race has never been run before the entire $195,000 is up for grabs with everybody having an even chance to be the winner."

Jeane Dixon Predicts

PRESIDENT NIXON'S CABINET

Two of the President's new Cabinet members will be spotlighted. The able Elliot Richardson will come up against almost an impregnable wall when he attempts to delve into the military-civilian bureaucratic "sacred cow" complex within the Department of Defense. The firmly entrenched "in house" structure will frustrate his every move.

And Peter Brennan, the secretary of labor designate, being in a key spot, will be called upon to solve many problems coming from illegal and semi-legal immigrants who deprive American workers of jobs. A prominent Democratic senator will make these problems much more difficult for the secretary. Youth minorities will also create problems for Mr. Brennan.

WARS — Wars and threats of war will continue in Southeast Asia, the Middle East and South America.

South Vietnam, The Philippines, the two Irelands, and Italy will remain selected victims of our opposing forces, and there will be no peace for these countries until 1975. In 1976 I get that world relationships with Russia will begin improving, carrying into the future . . . then peace will come for these countries.

U.S. Economy — I feel a steady rise in our economy, bringing increased prosperity until almost 1976; then internal social unrest will begin to hamper its steady growth.

Silver will assume progressively more important role in our lives, and I feel its use increasing in industrial and automotive fields.

The stock market will make a slow, steady rise, with the Dow-Jones average trend also moving steadily upward.

MAGAZINES — A year ago, I predicted that many news magazines, such as LIFE, would discontinue publication because of the competition from television. It was destined that this fine periodical would end in 1972.

Now I feel more magazines, based on similar formats and techniques, will end in 1973. The remaining more or less successful ones will specialize in particular areas such as sports, technical subjects and sex.

DISASTERS — Three natural disasters will occur during 1973, bringing death and destruction. Relief agencies should be on the alert constantly.

Rights Fairbanks Office to Resume Full Time Work

FAIRBANKS — Robert Willard, the Executive Director of the Alaska Human Rights Commission announced that agency's Fairbanks Field Office will again resume full time operations commencing Monday, January 22.

Willard said that Field Representative Ernest W. Griffin will be on duty after being on an extended leave of absence.

"This is the reason for the difficulty of persons desiring to reach our Fairbanks Office," the Director said, "and I must apologize for the inconvenience."

Willard explained that his Commission has jurisdiction over all cases involving discrimination in employment, housing, public accommodations, financial dealings and State operations.

The complaints may be on the basis of race, color, national origin, religion, age, physical handicaps or sex. He also said the Commission's jurisdiction is extended to all business enterprise, industry, State and local government.

Persons who have complaints should contact the Commission's Office at 602 Barnette St., or call 452-1561.

Willard returns to his Anchorage Headquarters before heading for Juneau and other South-eastern points on Commission business.
