FAIRBANKS—"Bailiwick," a 30-minute weekly television program produced by KUAC-TV at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, is being seen in 10 communities throughout Alaska.

The program deals with various topics of interest to Alaskans from personality profiles to home improvement hints.

It is broadcast in Juneau, Ketchikan and Sitka at 7:30 p.m. on Mondays and in Haines, Kodiak, Kotzebue, Nome, Petersburg, Skagway and Wrangell on Saturdays at 5:30 p.m. In each case the show is carried on Channel 2.

KUAC general manager Don Upham said future program subjects included gardening, housing, vacation safety, and a once-a-month program on the Alaska Native, produced by Moses Wassilie.

Upham said KYUK in Bethel plans to carry the show but a time has not been established and negotiations for airing in Anchorage are still under way.

"Bailiwick" is directed by Frank Herriott and Wassilie.
