

On to Harvard

A Nome Eskimo young man has been accepted at Harvard University. He is Ed Morris Milligrock, a senior at Nome High School. He will enter Harvard in the fall.

Milligrock will enter the university with a full scholarship. Harvard is considered as the top institution of learning in the nation.

Ed received his acceptance papers last Monday at Nome. He has also attended courses in the Upward Bound program at the University of Alaska during the past two summers.

Milligrock is interested in science and anthropology. Those who know him consider him as "a bright boy" who will have a good future.

Ed is the eldest son of the Dwight Milligrock family of eight brothers and sisters.

Ed Morris has worked at the U.S. Weather Bureau at Nome during summers. He was born in 1950 at Nome.