

THE SECOND GROUP of Community Health Aids to complete the formal two-week training course in Anchorage are shown in a graduation lineup on the day of receiving certificates from Dr. Holman R. Wherritt, Director, Alaska Native Health Area Office. The aides were involved day and evening during the course which included class sessions, special individual instruction by specialists and work with head nurses on the wards of the Anchorage Native Medical Center. Besides general first aid care and what to look for in a sick person in order to report to a doctor, the aides learned methods of preventing illness and keeping health in a community. Pictured are, left to right: Marie Robinson, Unalaska; Anesia Kudrin, Akutan; Sophia Simeonoff, Akhiok; Mrs. Eva Boyce, instructor and course coordinator; Pauline Dushkin, Nikolski; Sophie Stepitan, St. Paul Island, Pribilofs; and Mary Malchoff, Port Graham.
