

Alaska Airlines reports passenger mile decline

Alaska Airlines reported September revenue passenger miles of 203 million, an 8 percent decline from the 219.9 million flown a year earlier.

The passenger load factor — the percentage of available seats occupied by fare-paying passengers — for the month was 51.7 percent, down from the 54.8 percent recorded in September 1985.