able, public-spirited men and women to volunteer as 4-H leaders;

—recognize the important part played by friends of 4-H locally and nationally, and express appreciation to them.

Aiding club members with 4-H Week events here and elsewhere will be 367,000 4-H local leaders, who guide 4-H work in their communities throughout the country. They will be assisted by 138,600 older 4-H'ers called junior leaders.

More information on 4-H is available by writing Virgil Severns, Co-operative Extension Service, University of Alaska, or Mrs. Gladys Musgrove, Extension agent, Box 400, Nome, Alaska.
