

Today's youth are tomorrow's leaders

Every year, students leave their homes in pursuit of higher education. At the same time, others are returning to put their newly acquired education to use.

Each passing day, life becomes more complex in the Bush, and education becomes more valuable. For jobs. For opportunity. For future leaders.

At Chevron U.S.A., we feel higher education is one of the most important building blocks in anyone's life. That's why Chevron is pleased to award money for scholarships to the University of Alaska, Alaska Pacific University, Sheldon Jackson College and others. Not necessarily to educate youth in oil related activities. But to educate them in worthwhile fields that can lead to successful professional and vocational careers.

For every Alaskan, an education offers the opportunity to expand perceptions and knowledge. And that's something of which we're proud to be a part. Because today's youth are tomorrow's leaders.
