

Tiny Elim Samples Presidential Poll

The little village of Elim on Norton Bay recently held a poll to see how the villagers would vote for President of their choice. The following tells the story in the village's ELIM EDUCATOR.

"Our reporters ran around the village and asked folks the following question: 'If you were voting for President today, for whom would you vote?'"

"Here are the results:

"Senator Bobby Kennedy—21 votes.

"President Johnson —20 votes.

"Richard Nixon—8 votes.

"Romney—3 votes.

"Reagan and a couple of other fellows were on the ballot but didn't get any votes."

HOTCAKES

Elim third grader, Marlene Saccheus, wrote in the ELIM EDUCATOR about hotcakes:

"This is about eating hotcakes. We start eating hotcakes in school now. This morning they ate hotcakes. I sure like hotcakes. Many children like hotcakes too. Hotcakes are real good.

"Jack ate 10 this morning. He is in the seventh grade. Evelyn and Gary ate 6 hot-cakes. Evelyn is in the third grade and Gary is in the first grade."

First grader, Stanton Nakaruk, wrote more about hotcakes:

"We ate hotcakes this morning. I ate four hotcakes. All the children ate hotcakes too. I like hotcakes. I like the cookers. All the children ate hotcakes this morning."
