

Gale May Have Interfered with Roast Turkey

By HAROLD RIACH
Wrangell, Alaska

It has been windy in Wrangell for the last couple days. In fact, many southeast Alaskan cities had strong winds up to 70 miles per hour. In some places much damage was done.

In many cities, including Wrangell, the power was off on Thanksgiving because of the strong winds.

Many people had a hard time trying to get their turkey roasted in their oven, I bet.

Wrangell was lucky that the power was off only about two hours altogether. Some cities had the power off for many hours.