Health Services Furnished Indians

Sen. Ted Stevens has co-sponsored legislation to fully reimburse state governments for health services furnished Indians under the Medicaid program.

Presently state governments pay a portion of the cost of Medicaid services to Indians. However, similar services to Indians through the Indian Health Service are fully repaid by the federal government.

"This is an obvious inequity and clearly unfair to the states involved," Stevens said. "This bill, by providing full reimbursement, will protect the states from financial pressures if large numbers of Indians choose to take advantage of the Medicaid program."

Stevens said the increased reimbursement would apply to all Indians and Alaska natives eligible for medical services through the Indian Health Service.
