

APU offers doctoral class

In conjunction with Boston University, Alaska Pacific University officials announced recently the proposal of a cooperative doctoral program in Human Resources Education.

A pilot course will be offered this summer to assess interest in the program. If successful, the program will be the first and only campus-based Doctorate in Education program in Alaska.

"We've been working on this for more than a year," said Dr. Jane Evanson of APU. "Our pilot course will tell us if there's enough interest in the state to proceed. We think there is."