

VISITING NATIVE VILLAGE—Two Eskimo women from Savoonga on St. Lawrence Island are having a cup of coffee with Mathew Titus of Minto at the Native Village at the Alaskaland, the Centennial Exposition site in Fairbanks in 1967. Matthew Titus works at the village for the benefit of the tourists. The women, Myra Seppilu, left, and Daisy Uiyuklook, right, are attending the University of Alaska to take a refresher course in Head Start teaching which they do in Savoonga. —DIGNA JOHNSON Photograph
