

'Shismaref Breeze'

A new "breeze" is blowing in Shishmaref but unlike those constantly hitting the village from the Bering Strait, this one is designed to carry news.

Officially called the "Shishmaref Breeze," the publication first came out last spring and is the village newspaper.

Located on the coast of the Seward Peninsula, Shishmaref is known for its seal hunting.

According to the editor Florina Tocktoo, all profits from the paper will go toward a new community hall scheduled to be built this fall.

The publication relates happenings of the villagers and visits made by outsiders to the town.

Copies are ten cents an issue and can be obtained by writing "Shishmaref Breeze," Shishmaref, Alaska.
