

DC exhibit features Alaska artists

Many outstanding Alaska Native artists will have their works exhibited in the Russell Senate Office building April 13-24 as part of a 100-piece show. In all, 33 of Alaska's top artists will be exhibited.

"It's really going to be exciting," said Chuna, one of the artists. Chuna will be traveling to the nation's capital and while he is well-known for his Yupic dancing, performing is not on his agenda. "We're going to relax, and have a great time," he said.

Courtesy of Alaska Airlines, 30 crates laden with original paintings, sculptures and prints with an estimated value of $500,000 will be flown from Anchorage to Seattle. Once in Seattle, the artwork will be transported courtesy of American Airlines to Washington, D.C.

The reception and exhibit which will take place in the Senate Caucus Room of the Russell Senate Office Building, are hosted by Senator and Mrs. Ted Stevens, Senator and Mrs. Frank Murkowski, Congressman and Mrs. Don Young and Governor Bill Sheffield on April 13.

The Alaska exhibit will be shown in the Rotunda of the Russell Senate Office Building through April 21. This exhibit of some of Alaska's most prestigious visual artists is being held in commemoration of the 1984 25th anniversary of the passage of the Alaska Statehood Act. It is the first event to be held in celebration of this historic Alaskan occasion.

The exhibition is presented by Artique Ltd. Gallery in Anchorage.

Participating artists are from all parts of Alaska — from Kodiak Island to the small villages of Eek, Gustavus, Shishmaref and Barrow, to the cities of Juneau, Fairbanks and Anchorage.

Participating artists include:
