

Snowball named outstanding volunteer by school district

Ben Snowball recently was selected as an outstanding volunteer by the Anchorage School District.

Snowball is employed as the traditional education assistant and cultural resource person for the Johnson O'Malley Program at Cook Inlet Tribal Council.

Snowball began volunteering his time a year ago through his involvement with the Native Youth Olympics, the Native Youth Leadership Conference, the Native Youth Art Contest, the East High Native Culture Club and summer camps for youths.

"I do all of this on my own time, after working my regular job," Snowball said.

"There is a group of people in this community who volunteer their time and help make things happen. They really don't ask for much more than a little appreciation," he said.

Besides four children of his own, Snowball also cares for two foster children.
