

This Lady Burst a Great Big Bubble

By GEORGE JENNINGS GALE

OLYMPIA, WASHINGTON—Mrs. Besse Brown of the Wild Wood area here in Olympia is trying to fight pollution. So she agreed to hold a party to acquaint neighbors with Amway Trizyne laundry detergent which is sold door to door.

The detergent had been advertised as a product which would not pollute the water supplies.

However, she later learned from the government that the detergent is pollution creating.

Mrs. Brown held the party anyway and let the Amway lady give her talk. Then she stepped in and told the audience the truth. As you may know the sales lady was utterly shocked for she thought that she was selling her detergent to prevent pollution.

Mrs. Brown now is fighting the uphill battle against fine print. She claims that there is a law in fine print that gives you 48 hours to change your mind after buying anything worth more than $50.

According to Mrs. Brown, these laws and others regarding the interest on credit loans should be in bold faced type.

Such people, as Mrs. Brown, like me, are trouble makers but with no trouble makers we would be cheated even more than we are now.
