

We've just built Earth Stations Five & Six

Earth Stations numbers five and six, in Bethel and Nome, are now in operation. That means better communications for Western Alaska.

It's happening because RCA Alascom is dedicated to bringing modern communications to our state.

By the end of 1975 we plan to have six more major earth stations and 38 small bush stations in operation. That means the arrival of an integrated statewide communications system for virtually all of Alaska.

Alaska now has more domestic earth stations than any other state. But we're not stopping there. And we've developed a program designed to provide the 49th state with an advanced communications system making the most effective use of satellite technology.

So stand by. As Bethel and Nome now know, there's more to come.
