

"Careers" offers summer programs

Are you an Alaska Native high school student considering a health career?

If you are, the AFN Health

Careers has a program for you. The Summer Enrichment Program is designed as a six-week intensive study program aimed at upgrading Alaska Native high school student skills in curriculum areas relevant to college level course work applicable to a health profession. The program will be held in Anchorage from July 8 through August 18 on Alaska Pacific University's campus.

If you are selected as a participant, A.F.N. will pay all costs for books, room, board, transportation and supplies. You will also hear guest speakers, take field trips to hospitals and clinics and participate in recreational events.

If you are interested in your future, it is now. Prepare yourself by participating in the Summer Enrichment Program.
