

Mother, student and eventually teacher.

CL Cross-Lites says:

There is a victory over the devil for believers in Christ. Whosoever believes in Christ is born of God. Have you, my friend, been born of God?

Raising a lively two-year-old is a full-time job for most people. In that respect, Terri Hadley isn't an exception.

However, Terri is more than a good mother to the daughter she cherishes. She is also a top student pursuing a goal she set for herself a long time ago. To become a teacher and return to her village of Buckland near Kotzebue. To help more children in Buckland realize how a quality education can enrich their lives.

For nine months a year, Terri and her daughter Dora Kay live in Sitka, on the campus of Sheldon Jackson College. Terri attending classes and studying. Dora Kay, seeing new things and meeting new friends.

With the help of a scholarship funded by Chevron, Terri Hadley is making the most of her educational opportunities. Chevron will continue to support scholarship and vocational programs around the state. And the reason is simple. Many more Alaskan students are eager for the opportunity to achieve their goals.

Chevron is committed to see that they do.
