

* * *

The Veterans Administration may pay a Vietnam era veteran a G.I. Bill on-the-job training allowance, but only if he has a job for which he is being trained. So the key to the success of this important readjustment program is held by America's employers. It's up to them to unlock the door leading to challenging and promising careers for our Vietnam era veterans.