

On St. Lawrence, it looks like it's summertime

GAMBELL — Snow sure is going away early this year. There are only small spots here and there, and here it is, June.

It looks like summertime already. It is gravel all over at the village and two new housing areas.

It is just gravel around here to the areas far. Gambell is really nice with mountain close by, steep side of it facing the land where the sea is close.

When the ice at the ocean around goes away, there are not as many sea animals any more, so men don't go hunting as much any more.

There is lots of work. People cut up meat from seals, whales and walrus they killed at huntings and hang the meats outdoors for drying.

There are many racks full of meat drying. People soon will dry them up and put the meats away for food.
