

Jensen appointed to Glacier Bay post

National Park Service Regional Director Boyd Evison announced last week that Marvin O. Jensen has been selected as the new superintendent of Glacier Bay National Park in Southeast Alaska.

Jensen has been superintendent of Kenai Fjords since Sept. 1.

A new superintendent will be named for Kenai Fjords as quickly as possible.

Before his selection as superintendent at Kenai Fjords, Jensen was management assistant in Sequoia and Kings Canyon national parks and has worked for the Department of Interior for 24 years. His career has also included positions in Grand Canyon and assignments with the Bureau of Land Management in the Southwestern U.S.