Fink says city needs state money

Mayor-elect Tom Fink briefly went over some of his ideas that may help Anchorage's declining economy last Monday at the Anchorage Chamber of Commerce luncheon. Fink generally said it is going to be necessary to use the retained earnings of the Permanent Fund.

"The only way people are going to accept it is if they believe it's going to work," he said, speaking of those earnings.

Fink is also in favor of a wage freeze and wants to keep utilities low. Also, he said he doesn't want to see any layoffs.
