

Game biologists gather public comments on marine mammals

Alaska Department of Fish & Game biologists from the Game Division participated in a number of public meetings in villages and towns in Northwest Alaska in which ideas about management of marine mammals were discussed, according to ADF&G.

The public expressed comments and concerns regarding the return of management of walruses, sea otters and polar bears to the state.

Meetings also were held in Southcentral and Southeast Alaska and with various organizations representing groups interested in marine mammal issues. Additional meetings will be held later in other communities.

Those who want additional information may contact Kathy Frost or Lloyd Lowry at 456-5156 in Juneau at ADF&G.