

Alaska Mother of the Year Being Sought Throughout Alaska

The search for the Alaska Mother for 1968 has begun according to Mrs. Paul B. Haggland, Fairbanks, Alaska and Chairman for the Alaska Mothers Committee.

Civic, fraternal, social and religious organizations, or members of families are invited to nominate worthy candidates for this honor. Although anyone may submit the name of a worthy mother, the nominee must have the endorsement of a recognized group.

Other requirements are that her youngest child must be over 15 years of age, and that the character and achievements of her children indicate she has been a successful mother.

She must be an active member in her church or synagogue, have a sense of responsibility in civic affairs and be active in service for the public benefit.

She must be physically able to attend the meeting of American Mothers Association, Inc. held at Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City the first week in May.

At this time a National board of judges selects the American Mother of the year. The Alaska Mother will be a candidate for this honor.

If you know of a mother who qualifies and deserves to be so honored send today to Mrs. Paul B. Haggland, 5-2 Kellum St., Fairbanks, Alaska, for an official entry blank. All entries must be returned to Mrs. Haggland by March 1st.
