

YOUNGSTERS DANCE TOO—The heritage of the old Eskimo dances at Kotzebue is being preserved by children like these who are learning them from their elders. They are performed daily for visitors on Wien Air Alaska tours to the Arctic. Each dance tells a story to the beat of drums and chants. Note the gloves which are always worn or carried while dancing. No one seems to know why—"but it's always been that way."

—Wien Air Alaska Photo by Frank Whaley