

King Salmon may get larger Post Office

The U.S. Postal Service is conducting preliminary studies to determine future post office space needs in King Salmon, according to Robert J. Opinsky, Anchorage postmaster.

The studies will investigate the acquisition of land for the construction of a new post office to be leased to the Postal Service on a long-term basis.

The Postal Service is seeking a one-acre site for the construction of a 4,400-square-foot post office.