

With a name like "Pig" it's no wonder they're so sensitive.

"Pigs. It's a funny name considering how sophisticated these things are. They're so sensitive they can spot changes in the condition of the pipeline as small as 10 percent. That means we can check things out before there's a problem. As far as pipeline maintenance goes— a pig is man's best friend."

—Michael Cox, "Pig" Engineer