

FRANKLY, I COULD USE YOUR HELP!

Here's what we're doing to improve long distance telephone service, and if you are a long distance telephone user, you know that completing long distance calls during the peak calling periods can be difficult.

RCA Alascom is adding more equipment to augment the ever-increasing needs of DDD callers. The unprecedented number of long distance calls by all Alaskans has resulted in an overload of equipment during peak calling hours.

You can help! Try placing your long distance calls to cities like New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and others before 7 a.m. when the rates are lower and circuits are more readily available. And don't forget that by dialing after 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, or anytime on the weekends you'll also save money, and get your call through faster.

RCA Alascom has pledged its total resources to providing all of Alaska with a modern communications system.

While our additional equipment is being installed as rapidly as possible, we're hoping we can count on your cooperation Thank you.
