1 Year Resident Requirement Challenged

Attorney General John E. Havelock pledged to provide a "vigorous defense" of the one year residence preference for state employment that was challenged by a law suit Thursday.

The suit, brought by Susan K. Wylie of Juneau, seeks to have the State's durational residency requirement, which gives preference in state employment to persons who have been residents of Alaska for one year or more over other residents, declared invalid and unconstitutional.

Havelock said the state's "preference for hiring Alaskans who have lived here for one year or more is not an arbitrary distinction in terms of economic or constitutional policy."

He said residential preference is "valid public policy on economic grounds, and I will give it a vigorous defense, taking the case as far as necessary in an effort to get it upheld."

The Attorney General said the employment preference for State residents of at least one year "implements the state policy that those persons who have been in the state the longest and who may have been unemployed the longest can constitute those most needing employment relief and constituting the largest burden on the State's taxpayers."

"Consequently, the state is justified in providing them an employment preference over people who are newly arrived in the state," Havelock said.

The suit claims that the residential preference hiring practice imposes an unreasonable burden on interstate commerce and on the right of citizens of the United States to travel freely, and that it violates the equal protection provision of the United States Constitution.

Fishing Boat Capt. And Crew Nabbed

The captain and four crewmen of the purse seine boat Commander pled guilty to fishing in a closed area in south Behm Canal and were fined a total of $2,200 in Superior Court in Ketchikan on July 25th, a Dept. of Public Safety spokesman said Wednesday.

Approximately 2,500 pounds of salmon were seized by Fish and Wildlife officers and sold to a local fish buyer. Proceeds of the sale were turned over to the state's general fund.

$1,400 in fines were suspended providing the captain and crewmen violate no fish and game laws for one year.
