

Announces Subsidiary Addition

FAIRBANKS—Alaska International Industries, Inc., announced the formation of a new subsidiary to be engaged in the general construction and contracting business.

The new company, named Alaska International Construction, Inc., will be headed by Lon McDermott, former president of Alaska-based Burgess Construction Company.

Other key personnel include Thomas W. Hendrix as vice president and chief engineer, and Lawrence E. Fossum as construction coordinator and corporate secretary. Both Hendrix and Fossum were formerly with Burgess.

"We look forward to this new company providing the additional construction services greatly needed by Alaska," said Neil G. Bergt, president of Alaska International Industries.

Alaska International Construction, Inc., becomes a member of Alaska International's operating subsidiaries which include Alaska International Air, Weaver Brothers, Inc., and Valdez Alaska Terminals, Inc.
