programs involving equal employment opportunity in the Interior Department's many activities in Alaska.

"Her career in private industry and the federal government, as well as her broad knowledge of minority related matters in Alaska, have ably qualified her for this position," Secretary Morton said of Ms. Mayo.

He noted that Ms. Mayo's assignment requires close coordination with federal, state and municipal government officials, including the governor, union officials and representatives of minority and women's organizations.

Ms. Mayo's career includes 15 years in administration positions in private industry before she joined the federal government in 1951. She has held a number of posts in the Anchorage Federal Executive Association, including Secretary of the Equal Employment Opportunity Committee and first Chairman of the Subcommittee on Status of Women. In 1968 she won the Association's Outstand-
