

OF AFN CONVENTION IN ANCHORAGE

PERFORMER—Larkins, the Tundra Times, said that Howard was performing a song that he had written about the Tundra Times. Larkins said that he had written the song about the Tundra Times and that he had written it about the Tundra Times. Larkins said that he had written the song about the Tundra Times and that he had written it about the Tundra Times.

REST OF THE—Larkins, the Tundra Times, said that Howard was performing a song that he had written about the Tundra Times. Larkins said that he had written the song about the Tundra Times and that he had written it about the Tundra Times.

SOLD TO THE—Gentleman from Barrow, Sam Kins, who is a member of the Tundra Times, said that he had sold the Tundra Times to the Tundra Times. Kins said that he had sold the Tundra Times to the Tundra Times and that he had sold it to the Tundra Times.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER—Alaska Governor William A. Egan delivered the opening remarks on the first day of the AFN Convention on Dec. 20. Egan said that he was proud to be in Anchorage and that he was proud to be in Alaska.

I WANT TO DO THIS—Robert Marshall, president of the Ahlita Corporation, accepted the certified roll on behalf of Southcentral Alaska Indians during ceremonies at the convention. Ahlita, the smallest of the regional corporations, had a healthy sized delegation at the convention.

ONE WICK THAT WASN'T LIT—Jack Wick, president of the Koniag Corporation of Kodiak, accepted the enrollment certification from Dr. Lynn and Enrollment Coordinator John Hope, right.

*All AFN Convention
Photographs by
Marge Bauman*