

Program targets pregnant women who are addicted

When a pregnant woman is addicted to alcohol or drugs, her baby's emotional and physical health is at risk, according to Humana Hospital-Alaska.

To help women addicted to drugs or alcohol gain control over their addiction before or during pregnancy, Humana is offering a special therapeutic program and support groups.

The cost is $25 per session.

Interested women can apply for this prenatal alcohol and drug abuse support group by contacting Humana Hospital-Alaska Addictive Behavior Center at 264-1622.