

Guest of Honor At TT Banquet Is Bill Byler

"Honoring Native Leadership" will be the theme of this year's Tundra Times banquet, to be held October 23.

Invitations are being sent to Native leaders to attend the banquet, which will take place in conjunction with the annual AFN banquet at the Captain Cook Hotel in Anchorage October 23-25.

Guest of honor at the banquet will be Bill Byler, and the official hostess is Ginny Nathan, 1975 Eskimo-Indian Olympics Queen.

The menu this year will feature salmon. Hors d'oeuvres featuring Native delicacies will also be served. These will be donated by the regional corporations.

A cocktail hour will precede the banquet, and the door prize, a parka made by Olive Anderson of Fairbanks, will be given away.

A new award will be given this year, honoring the person most valuable to the Tundra Times during the past year.

Tickets to the banquet and following dance are priced at $25 each. They will be sold by tables or books, according to Toni Jones, of the banquet committee. This is so groups may sit together, and seats of late comers won't be taken.

Presently, ticket sales are open for reservations by the regional corporation officers. The rest of the places will be sold to the public and will be available soon.
